My name is Sarah Taimur. I am an academic medical doctor practicing in New York City, United States. I am a past graduate of Allama Iqbal Medical College, class of 2002. My work involves teaching students and medical doctors at various stages of their training, and I have been fortunate to serve as a career mentor for several young professionals.

As you may know from your acquaintance with my father, we come from a long line of teachers. Both my paternal grandfather (Mohammad Afzal Khan) and maternal grandmother (Farukh Baig) worked as school teachers in Pakistan. I wish to honor their lives and create a means of sustainable support for students in Pakistan.

I propose here an annual, monetary, scholarship of one thousand (1000.00) US dollars to The Nizam Trust, in tuition support of students in the Doctor of

The primary objective of the society is unambiguous: it is devoted to enhancing the overall welfare of disadvantaged children through a holistic approach.

Primary emphasis is placed on education, with the monthly donation supporting access to high-quality schooling. This includes covering tuition fees, providing school supplies, and facilitating educational programs. Additionally, these funds play a pivotal role in strengthening healthcare services, encompassing medical expenses, vaccinations, health check-ups, and treatments, all of which are vital for the holistic development of the children.

Furthermore, the society ensures that proper nutrition is readily available to address immediate hunger and promote long-term health and vitality among the children. The consistent and dependable monthly support from The Nizam Trust has become an invaluable resource that empowers the Khidmat-ul-Nisa Welfare Society to plan and execute its programs with utmost effectiveness. This unwavering commitment is making a profound and enduring impact, offering a brighter and more promising future to underprivileged children.
